Healthy Age Friendly Homes Programme

Healthy Age Friendly Homes

Our Healthy Age Friendly Homes programme is expanding, and our Age Friendly family is growing. This week our Healthy Age Friendly Homes Team moved premises to the beautiful town of Kells, Co. Meath, to facilitate all the wonderful new staff that will be starting with the programme in the coming weeks.

We managed to get a photo of some of our new team members and we will be doing an update on all the new staff joining our family.

We want to wish them all the best in their new roles and we look forward to working with everyone.

Updates to HSE Guidance on Management of COVID-19

Guidance on the use of face masks:

- The universal wearing of facemasks in hospitals and healthcare settings ends from Wednesday 19th April.
- Healthcare workers should wear a surgical mask or respirator mask in settings where patients have suspected or confirmed COVID-19 or respiratory illness.
- Patients and visitors will be advised by staff if they need to wear a face mask, to protect themselves or other people.
- Staff, patients or visitors can continue to use a mask if they choose and facemasks will continue to be available in health and care settings for staff, patients and visitors.
- Healthcare workers do not need to wear a facemask in healthcare settings where they are not clinically required. Staff will continue to do a point of care risk assessment before treating service users. Local risk assessments will decide which settings will continue or stop using facemasks.

The transition from routine mask use to risk-based mask use is a major change. Some staff members and some patients or visitors may wish to take some additional time to feel comfortable with the change. Hospitals will continue to provide masks to those who prefer to wear them. Staff members and patients who prefer to continue to wear masks will be facilitated by colleagues and managers.

HSE Talking Health and Wellbeing Podcast, Episode 8 - Social Prescribing

HSE Talking Health and Wellbeing Podcast, Episode 8 - Social Prescribing

This week, we speak to Caragh Munn, Social Prescribing Co-ordinator with Bray Partnership, who explains how Social Prescribing focuses on ‘What Matters to the Person’ rather than ‘What is the Matter with the Person.’ People can self-refer to Social Prescribing or be referred by a health professional or community support worker who identifies when a social prescription may assist rather than a medical prescription. A Social Prescribing Link Worker aims to provide people with the support and encouragement they need to take an active role in their own health and wellbeing.

For some people, taking that first step helps them build meaningful connections and establish a sense of belonging within their community. Caragh shares examples of how Social Prescribing has transformed people’s lives and explains how you can access Social Prescribing Services in your community.

Listen to and follow the HSE Talking Health and Wellbeing Podcast wherever you get your podcasts or on HSE Health and Wellbeing YouTube and leave a review on your channel of choice.

All HSE-funded Social Prescribing Services are delivered by the HSE's community partners, such as Local Development Companies and Family Resource Centres. Details are available at: <https://allirelandsocialprescribing.ie/members-map/>

Men and Mental Health Webinar

HSE Health and Wellbeing with their partners are hosting a Men and Mental Health Webinar on the 25th April from 12.00 – 13.15 which will explore ways men can improve their mental health. You can register here.

The webinar will include inputs from:

- Former Irish International Athlete and Mental Health Advocate, David Gillick
- HSE Senior Psychologist, Mark Smyth
- Mental Health advocate and founder of Jumpers for Goalposts, Keith Kelly

The webinar will be hosted by Lorcan Brennan from the Men's Development Network.

National Programmes for Age-Friendly Cities and Communities: Toolkit

National programmes for age-friendly cities and communities
A guide

The "National programmes for age-friendly cities and communities: a guide" is now publicly available and ready to use. This guide responds to the call of the UN Decade of Healthy Ageing (2021–2030) for the development of national guidance on fostering healthy ageing in cities and communities.

This guide provides direction to national authorities and stakeholders responsible for or involved in forming or sustaining national programmes for age-friendly cities and communities (AFCC). The guide includes suggestions for meaningfully engaging older people in creating age-friendly environments, detailed examples of existing national AFCC programmes, and practical steps for creating or strengthening such a programme, building on the wealth of experiences and examples within our Global Network for Age-friendly Cities and Communities.

The WHO guide to developing national programmes for age-friendly cities and communities is supported by a continuously updated toolkit to help you put the guide to action. Whether you are looking to develop and sustain a national programme on age-friendly cities and communities or to advocate for such a programme, please make use of the toolkit over the next months and years to come.

MSc Ageing & Public Policy

Driven by a commitment to research-informed interdisciplinary education, the MSc in Ageing and Public Policy in the National University of Ireland Galway [NUIG] examines demographic ageing from a public policy perspective, critically assessing existing approaches and future directions to secure an effective and fair means of engaging older people in ageing societies.

Graduate Employability

The programme is aimed at preparing graduates, and/or enhancing the career prospects of existing employees, for policy, service planning and research positions focused on issues and programmes related to ageing and older people, and other areas related to social, economic and policy agendas.

Graduates with the skills taught in this programme are highly valued by public, civil-society and private organizations, such as government departments, the Health Service Executive, local authorities, research and policy consultancy groups, non-governmental organizations, and public and private care providers.

Unique Programme Internationally

First programme of its kind in Ireland, and one of the first that is available internationally.

Hosted at an internationally recognised research centre - Irish Centre for Social Gerontology.

Delivered in collaboration with international policy experts.

Ageing-related policy placements with key national and international governmental, non-governmental and civil society, and research and policy stakeholder organisations.

Why Ageing, Why Now

With the world's older population projected to double by 2050, population ageing is recognised as a global challenge for sustainable development, and one of three major transformations facing the European Union, and the social, economic and health systems of its states.

The Sustainable Development Goals 2030 Agenda and the European Commission Green Paper on Ageing testify to how ageing can create sustainability and equity challenges in every major policy domain – social protection, health, finance, housing and environment, employment, etc.

The COVID-19 pandemic has not only exposed weakness in ageing-related policy, but also the neglect of the diversity of needs and preferences of ageing populations.

There is a marked gap in graduate labour force skills, and capacity, to help public agencies, civil society organisations and private companies to address these challenges and to capitalise on the opportunities within ageing societies.

This interdisciplinary programme will address this gap and will give graduates in-depth analytical skills sets which will enhance their employability in general and in age-specific public policy organisations.

Graduate Skills

Provides topic specific and transferable skills sets including:

- In-depth knowledge of ageing related policy
- In-depth knowledge of public policy systems
- Capacity for critical thinking and theorizing
- Ability to assess and evaluate public policies
- Research, data and analytical methods
- Ability to apply data analysis techniques to real world policy challenges

Entry Requirements and Recognition of Prior Learning

In addition to formal academic entry requirements (click here), the MSc in Ageing and Public Policy offers a Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) process and encourages applications from people with other forms of certified learning and experience, and who may not fulfil these requirements.

The Universal Design Grand Challenge (UDGC) is back for 2023!

The Centre for Excellence in Universal Design (CEUD) is delighted to announce that the UDGC is back for 2023. This year, we are really pleased to be able to let you know that the awards night (dated for October 2023) will be an in-person event for the first time since 2019. We will give more details in due course.

About the Universal Design Grand Challenge 2023

Applications opened on 13th April 2023, and we encourage students across the Republic of Ireland, who are in their final two years of study, to apply for this year's awards. The competition is open to undergraduate and postgraduate students. There are three categories:

- Built Environment
- Products and Services
- Information and Communications Technology (ICT)

Universal Design is simply great design. It's design that works for people regardless of their age, size, ability or disability. It's intuitive. It's clever. It's creative and it's design that works for everybody.

In addition to cash prizes, this competition is a terrific springboard for students, helping them to build their reputation as a great designer. We are also delighted to announce that, in partnership with Enterprise Ireland, one project will win a 'commercialisation award' which will enable the winners to investigate the feasibility of taking their project further.

To get started, click here: <https://universaldesign.awardsplatform.com/>

Students can work on the application in their own time. The form will guide them through what's needed. They can save their work and return to it at any time. The deadline for completion of applications is Thursday 8th June 2023.

What Can You do?

Promote the Universal Design Grand Challenge

Inspire and facilitate your students to solve real-life problems for people of any age, size or ability.

Spread the word about the UDGC within your courses and educational institution.

Support Your Students in Submitting Entries

- Encourage your students to apply before the deadline on 8th June: <https://universaldesign.awardsplatform.com/>
- Support them in identifying 4 or more ways that they can incorporate Universal Design Principles into their work.
- Confirm the student's entry: All student entries are required to nominate a course tutor or school representative to confirm they know the student project and the information in the entry form.
- Attend the awards ceremony: The finalists and their tutor/school representative will attend the Universal Design Grand Challenge Student Awards Final in October 2023

Help and Support:

The team at the Centre for Excellence in Universal Design are here to help and support educators in bringing Universal Design into the classroom. If there's anything that we can do to help or assist you along the way, please don't hesitate to get in touch.

Offaly Climate Action Workshop

Climate Action Workshop

Members of Offaly's Older Persons Council, Active Retirement Groups, Tidy Towns Committee's, and interested locals attended the Climate Action Workshop on Tuesday 18th April in Lough Boora Discovery Park. (Age Friendly Ireland and CARO). Gavin Harte, Sustainability Consultant, Climate Action Coach and Environmental Activist, delivered the training. Items such as climate science, carbon footprints, energy saving, home energy upgrade were discussed. The Climate Action Team from Offaly County Council were also in attendance.

The second part of the day included a site visit to An Portach Ciúin at Lough Boora (The Quiet Bog), with a talk hosted by Julie McLoughlin, Visitor Experience Lead, Lough Boora Discovery Park, Bord na Mona. An Portach Ciúin is set in a woodland clearing close to a wetland. The area is rich in nature with trees, meadow grasses, reeds, bog cotton and the wetland supporting a wealth of natural habitats. Collectively, An Portach Ciúin provides a feast of senses including the forms and colours of vegetation; the sound of gentle breeze rustling through the trees and reeds; the glistening light reflecting on the lapping water; the skyscape directly above and also reflecting in the water; and the magical symphony of birdsong from dawn to dusk.

Thursday 27th April, 7pm. Rock N Poet a discussion between Tom Mooney and Peter Murphy on for Poetry Day Ireland. What makes a song also a poem and a poem also a song? How do we ascribe the trade of poet and songwriter to performers like Jim Morrison, P.J. Harvey and Joni Mitchell. Remember when Seamus Heaney described the lyrics of Eminem in glowing terms, that he had "created a sense of what is possible - not just through his subversive attitude but also his verbal energy." So, what can make a song also a poem, and a poem also a song, are among the pertinent issues of our day that will be discussed by two writers up to their tonsils in poetry, criticism and performance, former Sunday Times book reviewer and programmer of Jazz at Johnstown, Tom Mooney, and the front man of Cursed Murphy Versus the Resistance and cultural critic for the Irish Times, Hot Press and RTE's Arena and author of two novels for Faber, John the Revelator (2009) and Shall We Gather at the River (2013), Peter Murphy.
